

Abstract

The invention relates to a steering wheel with at least one device for the fastening of build-on parts, the steering wheel having a steering wheel skeleton surrounded by foam. According to the invention, there is provision for the device provided for the fastening of build-on parts to be, on the steering wheel skeleton, a holding part which is fixed by the steering wheel foam surround and which projects out of the steering wheel foam surround for the fastening of at least one build-on part.